My bios is locked. but i have downloaded the flash zip file of P3K. i was trying to change my bios setting to 2.0 but it is not letting me, and wont give me the option. Please help me. Hi, Yes, in 4.3 you have to download the flash file for Bios P3k unlock. After you download it, You need to flash it. As for old P3k models, you can try to flash it. But be careful, some bios can hurt your mobo. And now I have a problem with the 2nd HDD. I can't change the partitions. It says something like: Select the HDD you want to use: Select the partition to be changed: Are you sure that your 2nd HDD is the C drive and the first partition is the D drive? Is that the right HDD number? If you can choose, the first partition should be C: and the second partition should be D:. But I can't understand what you have in mind. With all the help I have gotten in this forum and the help of a few of your mods here I was able to get most of my wireless cards working. I now have two specific cards and need help. 1. Intel 3945 wireless card The default 802.11G Intel WiFi card worked perfectly. I used it on both my laptops and the PC I am using at work and it worked flawlessly. Now I am trying to setup a mobile card. I got an HSUPA SurfAir USB adapter (USB to PCMCIA adapter), installed it on the PC I was working on, it picked it up (tried it on my other laptop too), and it worked. In Network Manager, I set it to get an IP address automatically, and it does. I then changed the settings in Wireless Network Connection to use a different network. It shows this as a HSDPA connection. After rebooting the laptop and logging on, I get an error saying "No LAN devices were found. If you have just installed a new card, please reconnect the computer to your network. Does anyone know what to do? 2. The Belkin N300 This card came with my PC. The driver is a windows driver for a wireless adapter. The card worked fine. I installed it on my laptop as well. 82157476af
